

Landscape of climate change research in New Zealand lunchtime discussion event

The Institute aims to host an event bringing together a range of people working in the area of climate change research in order to assess current work programmes. This lunchtime discussion event will cover the research intentions of key groups in the sector on climate change in the next two years in order to identify gaps, inform future priorities and maximise often limited research resources. The event will result in an illustration of the landscape of current and short-term future research on climate change in New Zealand.

Wednesday, 8 August 2018

12.30 – 1.30 pm

McGuinness Institute Office, Level 2, 5 Cable Street, Wellington

Currently this event is invitation only however please let us know if you would like to attend here: enquiries@mcguinnessinstitute.org.