Preface

BDO Wellington is a full service chartered accounting and advisory firm and our commitment is to helping our clients achieve their business and personal goals. To do this, we have created a culture of responsiveness to the needs of the business community.

We have enjoyed working with the McGuinness Institute to analyse the external reporting practices of NZSX-listed companies. Along with the Institute, we believe these annual reports represent the top businesses in New Zealand and should be somewhat representative of the wider business landscape in this country.

The methodology behind this work will enable either the Institute or other bodies to benchmark progress over time.

It has been a very interesting exercise and we look forward to discussion on the results.

Preface

The McGuinness Institute aims to undertake bold and ambitious projects that other organisations are unable to commit to or complete due to size, costs, complexity and risk. The ReportingNZ project, and in particular Working Paper 2018/01: NZSX-listed Company Tables is evidence of this.

To prepare Working Paper 2018/01, the McGuinness Institute team comprehensively reviewed all annual reports published by NZSX-listed companies in the 2016 calendar year, and listed on the NZSX in 2017. We believed it was time to take stock of the reports in the public arena, and sort and assess them by a range of information categories.

Our aims were twofold. First, we wanted to provide context for two surveys undertaken by the McGuinness Institute in collaboration with the External Reporting Board (XRB) in mid-2017. The first, the Preparers' Survey, asked Chief Financial Officers (Preparers of EER) what they thought about current and future EER practices. The second, the Users' Survey, explored whether the criteria, content and accessibility of corporate reporting is currently meeting the needs of Users.

As the two surveys indicate the current perceptions of EER practices by the Users and Preparers of this information, we felt it was necessary to also explore the actual practice of EER over the same period so we (or others who might like to repeat this work in the future) could identify actual trends, measure impacts and report changes over time. The second aim of this research, then, was to understand the current reporting landscape and how regulators and companies might together bring about change. With these aims in mind we reviewed the annual reports using the lens of the common good (e.g. where the goals might be significant improvements in the wellbeing of all current and future New Zealanders) rather than of a private investor (e.g. where the goals might be financial return and capital growth).

We believed that by looking at the annual reports of NZSX-listed companies we were in effect looking at the best in class. Not only are these companies legally required to publish information to a high standard, they also have a vested interest in communicating their values and goals. These companies, as a general rule, recognise the importance of maintaining an effective shareholder relationship (in terms of share value) and effective stakeholder relationships (in terms of retaining a social licence to operate).

We were fortunate to collaborate with BDO Wellington in this research. Particular thanks must go to Scott Cameron, who reviewed our data.

We hope our analysis of the 2017 NZSX-listed companies is a useful resource for academics, think tanks, industry groups and regulators.

Introduction

How to read this document

This working paper contains the results of our research only. The methods used to conduct this research are described in a separate paper, Supporting Paper 2018/01: Methodology for Working Paper 2018/01, which outlines the methods, challenges and obstacles we found when creating each table.¹

Section A of this introduction outlines how we determined the data sets underpinning our research. Section B outlines the limitations affecting the research as a whole, and this introduction finishes with a brief summary of the five sections that make up Working Paper 2018/01.

Each section of this document begins with a summary of its key data as it relates to the five themes of Project ReportingNZ: accessibility, engagement, content, frameworks and assurance. Some themes are more applicable to some sections than others.

The analyses contained in Working Paper 2018/01 are represented as a whole by tables. We have used the concept of a table consistently throughout the paper to illustrate the data. The tables are always followed by a detailed list of the relevant companies, and this information is accompanied by graphs when necessary to illuminate key findings. The beginning of each list corresponds to the first dark green box in the table, and follows the table left to right along each row.

The results of this research will be written up, alongside other findings from Project ReportingNZ, in Report 17 – Building a Reporting Landscape Fit for Purpose.

1 This way we can share our approach in detail by providing actual examples and inviting discussion over the method and definitions we have adopted. This is a complex area and we wanted to make sure our research was transparent and clearly explained.

Note: The data in this graph is also mentioned in Table 5a and the resulting methodology is discussed in Supporting Paper 2018/01 (see Table 5a).

* Five companies in this data set published two separate documents that together made up the company's annual report.

A: Determining the data sets for analysis

Three lists are central to this research. They are derived from a data request sent to NZX for the names of NZX Main Board (NZSX) issuers (see (i) and (ii) below) as at 30 June 2017. A fourth and fifth data set, not derived from the NZX data request, are also briefly explained.

(i) N = 163

Refers to the list of 163 entities listed on the NZSX as at 30 June 2017 (see Tables 1a–1c).

(ii) N = 129

N=129 Refers to the 129 companies from the list of 163 entities on the NZSX as at 30 June 2017. Please note trusts and funds were removed during analysis by only including companies with the terms ‘Limited’ or ‘Corporation’ in the company name. This process also excluded JPMorgan Global Growth & Income plc from the analysis (see Tables 2a–2e and Tables 3a–3e).

(iii) N = 126

Refers to the 126 companies from the list of 129 NZSX-listed companies that published annual reports and/or financial statements in the 2016 calendar year (see Figure 1 below, Tables 4a–4h and Tables 5a–5g).²

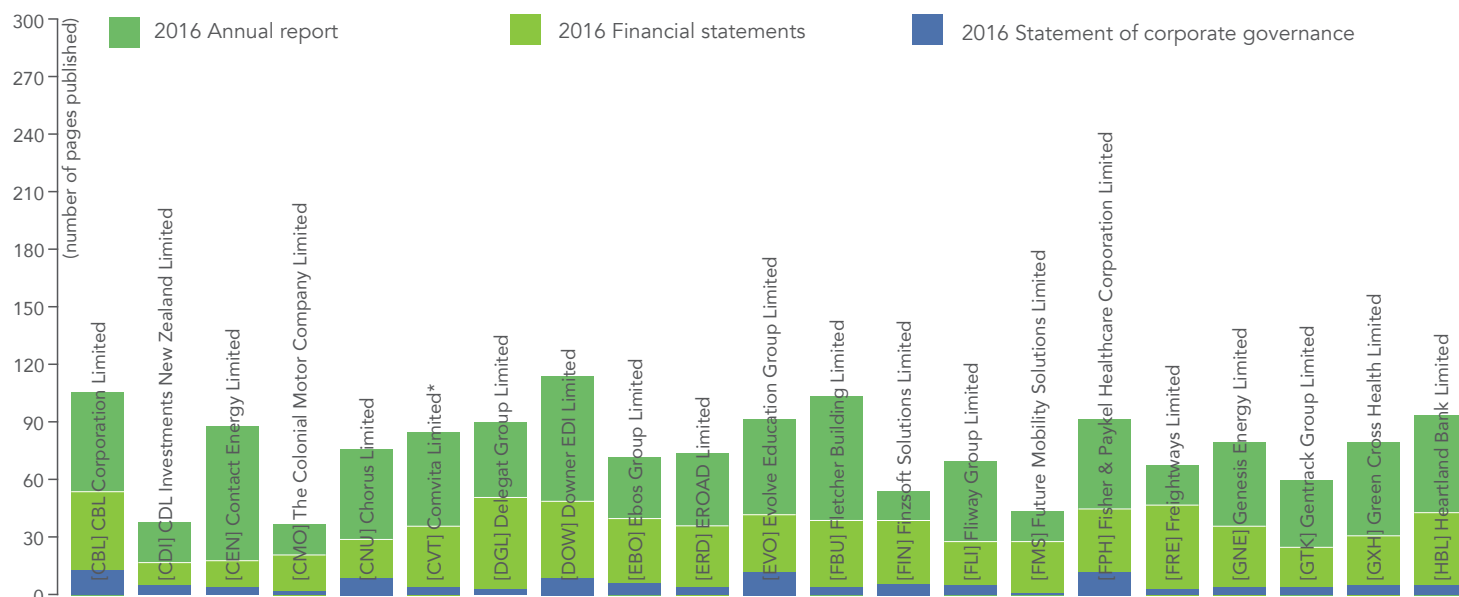

(iv) N = 200

Refers to the 2016 Deloitte Top 200 companies by revenue (e.g. Table 2e).

(v) N = 85

Refers to the list of companies with CFOs who completed the 2017 Preparers’ Survey (e.g. Table 2e).

- 2 The three companies that had not publicly published an annual report and/or financial statement were excluded from this dataset.

B: Limitations and boundaries

Below we briefly explain the limitations we are aware of which affect this research as a whole. Limitations and challenges specific to individual tables can be found in Supporting Paper 2018/01: Methodology for Working Paper 2018/01.

(i) Definitions and practical applications

One of the many challenges was defining the components of an annual report and in a few cases, what even makes up an annual report. In situations where two documents make up an annual report, they were merged for the purposes of our soft copy document searches.³

In situations where documents were not searchable (i.e. [ALF] Allied Farmers Limited, [BIL] Bethunes Investments Limited, [NZK] New Zealand King Salmon Investments Limited, [PGC] Pyne Gould Corporation Limited, [OCA] Oceania Healthcare Limited), text recognition software (Adobe Acrobat Pro) was used.

Many of the terms used in Working Paper 2018/01 are used in a way that is particular to this work. For clarity, a full glossary is provided at the end of this document.

(ii) Data set timing issues

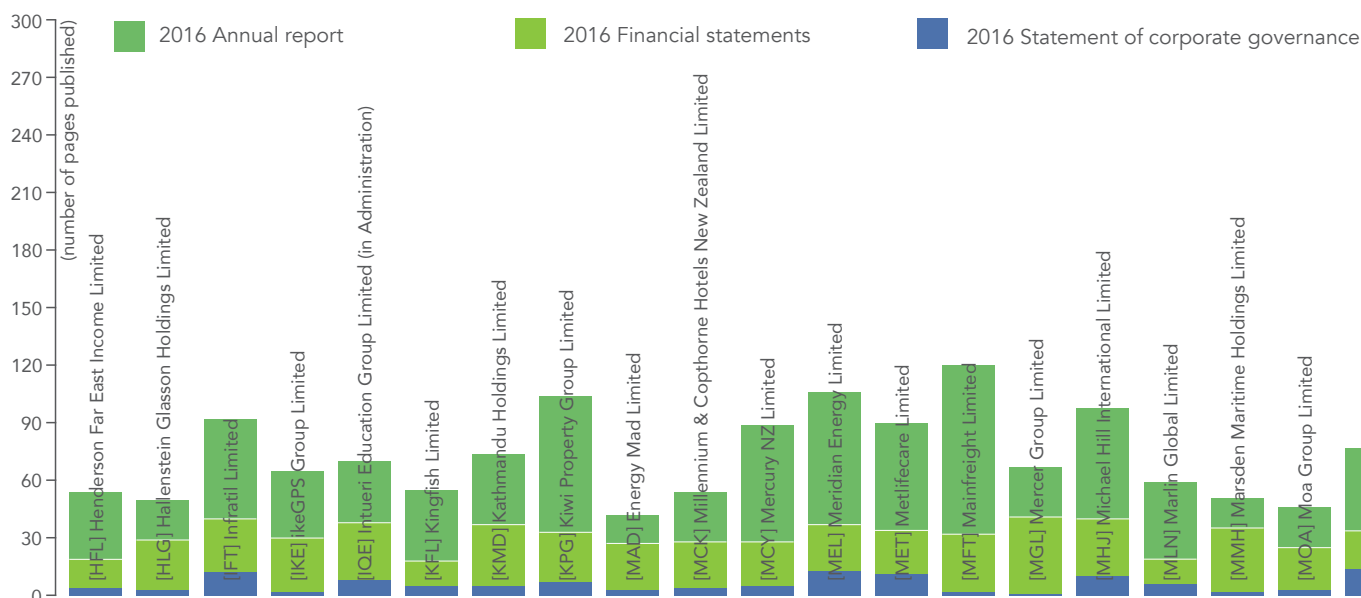

There is a number of timing issues that exist; there are four different time frames that are being used in this research:

- The annual reports used in this research were all published in the 2016 calendar year.
- The list of NZSX-listed companies is prepared as at 30 June 2017.
- The Companies Register was searched during September and October 2017.
- The list of 2016 Deloitte Top 200 companies is based on the latest available figures, verified and audited. This list was published on 1 December 2016 and the review included some 2015 reports.⁴

Many of these issues are inevitable due to how the data is collected and updated. For example, the Companies Register can only be reviewed once the companies have been identified. However, this timing issue may impact on the accuracy of the tables. For Table 2c the controlling party registrations refers to the list of NZSX-listed companies as at 30 June 2017, whereas the Companies Register search was at September 2017. To ensure transparency, whenever we have had reason to believe possible timing issues may affect the data we have identified them and their possible impacts clearly in the footnotes accompanying the affected tables.

3 We have made the annual reports available in a Dropbox, see www.dropbox.com/sh/m3tkrb45risim9q/AAApo9sph4icir3OyGSFfMe8a?dl=0. Hard copies of these documents are also available to view at our office upon request.

4 See www2.deloitte.com/nz/en/footerlinks/pressreleasespage/2016-deloitte-top-200-awards.html

(iii) Reporting standards, rules and legislation timing issues

The analyses in each section of this working paper have been based on the legislation that shapes the standard of reporting. The main pieces of legislation we have referred to are the Companies Act 1993, Financial Reporting Act 2013, Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013, NZX Limited Main Board/Debt Market Rules (May 2017) and NZ IFRS standards set out by the External Reporting Board (XRB).

Of note, ten companies in the analysis follow overseas reporting standards. For comparability, these companies have been analysed in line with the New Zealand standards.⁵

(iv) Presentation of figures

Unless otherwise stated, all figures are stated in thousands (000) of New Zealand Dollars (NZD) [NZ$000]. Figures in overseas currencies were recalculated using the exchange rate that matched the company's financial year end. The exchange rate was derived from the IRD Currency Conversions for the 2016 accounting period.⁶

When companies used reporting time frames other than the standard 12-month period, the financial figure was converted to provide a 12-month average (excluding Tables 4d and 4e).

(v) Presentation of percentages

All percentages were rounded to one decimal place.

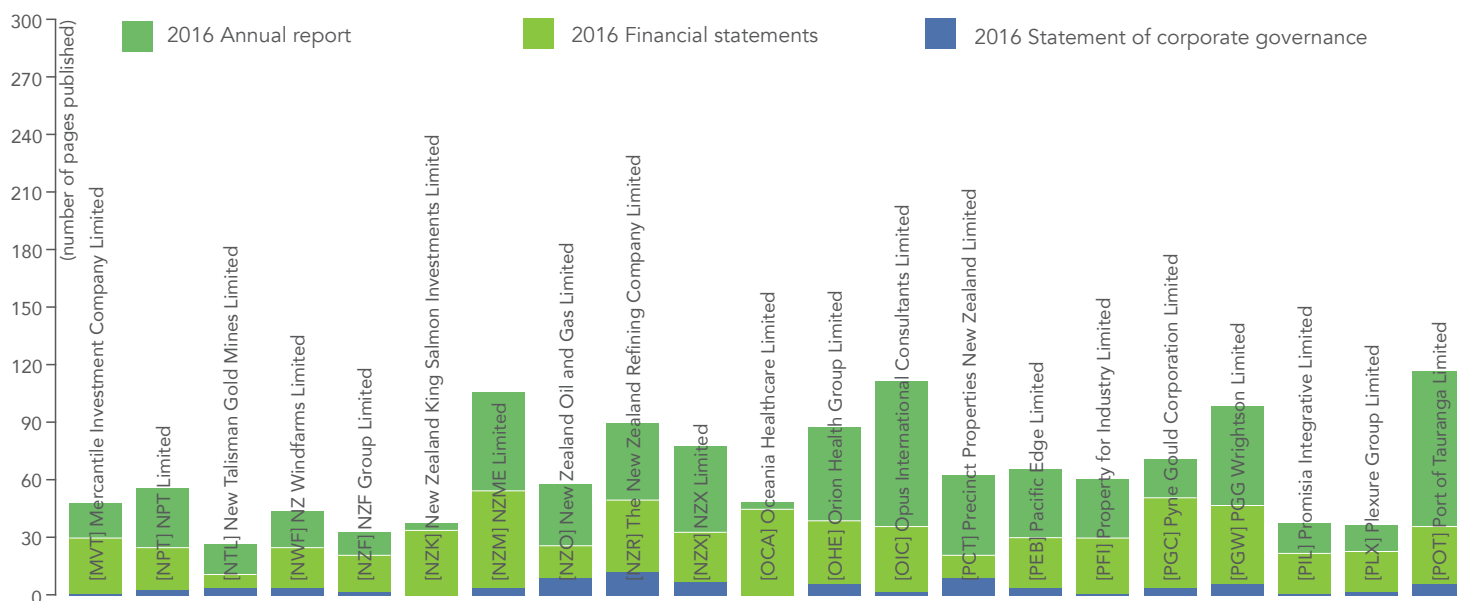

(vi) Review process

Please be aware the actual search of terms in documents was not audited by BDO Wellington. Only the results we found were sighted and therefore reviewed. This was due to the additional costs involved for an auditor to undertake a detailed search of each and every document.

However, once the McGuinness Institute had found positive search results, the relevant pages of the annual report and the subsequent tables were reviewed. In many cases this required discussion between the reviewers and McGuinness Institute staff as there is a degree of opinion inherent in determining when, for example, text is a target or not. These and other challenges are listed with the relevant methodologies in Supporting Paper 2018/01: Methodology for Working Paper 2018/01.

5 These ten companies are [AFI] Australian Foundation Investment Company Limited, [AMP] AMP Limited, [ANZ] Australia and New Zealand Banking Group Limited, [DOW] Downer EDI Limited, [HFL] Henderson Far East Income Limited, [MHJ] Michael Hill International Limited, [MVT] Mercantile Investment Company Limited, [PGC] Pyne Gould Corporation Limited, [TLS] Telstra Corporation Limited and [WBC] Westpac Banking Corporation.

C: About each section

Section 1: NZSX issuers framework [N= 163]

This section focuses on the existing market structures in which the 163 NZX Main Board (NZSX) issuers operate, and how the listings on the NZSX have changed over time. Table 1c identifies the companies that are reviewed throughout the rest of Working Paper 2018/01 (excluding trusts/funds).

Section 2: Location, structure and nature of business [N= 129]

This section focuses on the preliminary characteristics of the NZSX-listed companies: where the head office is; whether the company is owned, controlled or influenced by another entity (and how this information is made available); and the nature of the business/primary activity of the company. Table 2e includes a list of significant companies, both 2016 Deloitte Top 200 companies (ranked by revenue) and NZSX-listed companies, which we consider to be significant companies in New Zealand, to see which companies are listed on both the NZSX and the Deloitte Top 200.

Section 3: Reports published [N= 129]

This section focuses on the availability of company reports: where company financial statements and annual reports can be found, what reporting and accounting standards each company prepared its reports in accordance with, and the history of each company’s auditor reports. A particular focus is on any voluntary, recognized frameworks a company may have prepared their reports with and whether companies voluntarily prepared an additional non-financial report alongside their annual report.

Section 4: Financial information disclosed [N= 126]

This section focuses on comparable financial figures from the available company financial statements. Apart from Table 4g (which looks at political donations), all financial figures are mandatory. Please note that presentation figures differ across companies.

Section 5: Non-financial information disclosed [N= 126]

This section focuses on economic, social, human and natural capital, and records comparable non-financial information (corporate governance, gender, health and safety and the environment) from the available company annual reports. There are no consistent, clear and concise definitions of non-financial information. As such, we have developed our own definitions based on common usage. This is relevant for Tables 5c–g, which examine information companies voluntarily disclosed.

Key data

ENGAGEMENT | Communication with stakeholders

168 companies were listed on the NZSX when membership peaked in 2015. From 2015 to today, membership has trended slightly downwards (Tables 1a and 1b).

34% of NZSX-listed companies are also listed on the ASX. As at 26 March 2018, 15 New Zealand companies are listed on the ASX and not the NZSX (Table 1c).

Given the extent JBS Australia Pty Limited may have control over Scott Technology Limited, we consider JBS Australia Pty Limited could be reported in the notes as the ultimate entity.)
6. [SML] Synlait Milk Limited
See note 19: 'Parent entity. Bright Dairy Holding Limited hold 39.12% of the shares issued by Synlait Milk Limited (2015: 39.12%). Bright Dairy Holding Limited is a subsidiary of Bright Food (Group) Co. Limited, a State Owned Enterprise domiciled in the Peoples Republic of China.'
(NB: Bright Dairy Holding Limited is not on the Companies Register. Although the notes do not discuss a controlling party we thought this was unexpected considering Synlait Milk Limited is a subsidiary of Bright Dairy Holding Limited.)
7. [TGH] Tegel Group Holdings Limited
See note 6.4(a): 'The ultimate Parent entity within the Group is Tegel Group Holdings Limited (incorporated in New Zealand) of which 87.3% of the ordinary shares are owned by Claris Investments Pte. Limited as at balance date.'

- (NB: Claris Investments Pte Limited is not listed on the Companies Register. This note seems to conflict. Given the extent Claris Investments Pte may have control over Tegel Group Holdings Limited, we consider Claris Investments Pte could be reported in the notes as the ultimate entity.)
8. [TIL] Trilogy International Limited
See note 26(b): 'The Business Bakery held 49.2% of the details of shares issued in lieu of fees. Under the Company's shares at 31 March 2016 (2015: 49.5%).'
(NB: The Business Bakery is listed on the Companies Register. Given the extent of control of The Business Bakery may have over Trilogy International Limited, we consider The Business Bakery could be reported in the notes as the ultimate controlling party.)
9. [WHS] The Warehouse group Limited
See note 18: 'Shareholdings ... Sir Stephen Tindall (Director) has a beneficial shareholding of 93,687,096 shares (2015: 93,687,096 shares) which carry the normal entitlement to dividends.'
(NB: This note made clear this was a substantial shareholding (approx. 27.01% on p. 90). Sir Stephen Tindall's New Zealand address is on the Companies Register. Given the extent of control Sir Stephen Tindall may have over The Warehouse group Limited, we consider Sir Stephen Tindall could be reported in the notes as the ultimate controlling party.)

(NB: Auckland Energy Consumer Trust was not on the Companies Register. Entrust was not specially on the Companies Register but there were many companies that had Entrust in the title. Graph 5b(i): Gender diversity of directors (by numbers and/or percentages) [126]

- In both numbers and percentages [54]
- In numbers only [56]

Note: The numerical differences between Graphs 5b(i) [126] and 5b(ii) and (iii) [118] is because eight companies did not disclose any gender information at all. The numerical differences between Graphs 5b(ii) [118] and 5b(v)+(vi) [112] (overleaf) is because five companies ([AOR] Aorere Resources Limited, [BIL] Bethunes Investments Limited, [HFL] Henderson Far East Income Limited, [PFI] Property for Industry Limited and [TRS] TRS Investments Limited) disclosed that they had directors but did not employ officers and one company ([PGC] Pyne Gould Corporation Limited) disclosed the gender diversity of its directors but not its officers.
