

Anticipatory governance: how well is New Zealand safeguarding the future?

Jonathan Boston

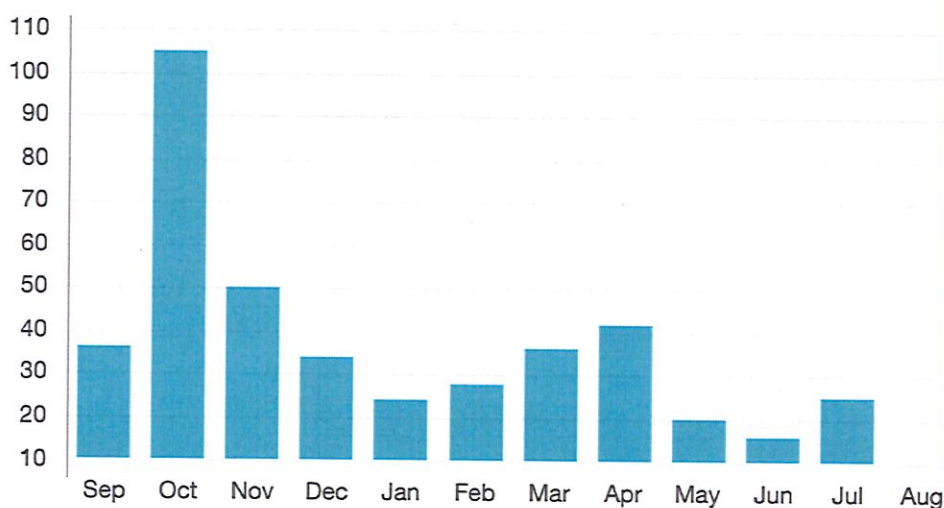

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.26686/pq.v12i3.4614>

Keywords: 'future-proof', Good governance, democratic institutions, inadequate foresight, regulatory frameworks

Abstract

Good governance has many attributes. Among these are anticipating tomorrow's problems, protecting the longterm public interest, and endeavouring to 'future-proof' the state (Boston et al., 2014). Sound anticipatory governance, in other words, is a critical ingredient. It is fundamental to advancing better government. But what exactly does it mean? Here are some suggestions.

Downloads

The Institute for Governance and Policy Studies, School of Government at Victoria University of Wellington

POLICY Quarterly

Volume 12 – Issue 3 – August 2016

SPECIAL ISSUE

Advancing Better Government

The Myth of the Shrinking State? What does the data show about the size of the state in New Zealand, 1900–2015

Norman Gemmell and Derek Gill

Anticipatory Governance: how well is New Zealand safeguarding the future?

Jonathon Boston

High Stakes – Disaster Risk in New Zealand

Reid Basher

Implications of Climate Change for New Zealand's Natural Hazards Risk Management

Judy Lawrence

Managing and Communicating Risk and Uncertainty in Macroeconomic Policymaking

Robert Kirkby and Martin Fukac

Science for Policy: the need for a Commission for Science

Shaun C. Hendy

3

11

25

30

40

46

A Constitutional Personality: does the New Zealand public service possess one, and is it in good order?

Chris Eichbaum

The Stewardship Deficit in New Zealand Health Policymaking

Verna Smith

Citizenship Education in New Zealand: policy and practice

Bronwyn E. Wood and Andrea Milligan

Advancing Better Tax Policy: the role of wealth taxes in New Zealand

Lisa Marriott

The Panama Papers and Foreign Trusts: what should be done?

John Prebble

50

56

65

74

82

 PDF

Published
2016-08-01

Issue
Vol. 12 No. 3 \(2016\): Policy Quarterly

Section
Articles

☐ License

Permission: In the interest of promoting debate and wider dissemination, the IGPS encourages use of all or part of the articles appearing in PQ, where there is no element of commercial gain. Appropriate acknowledgement of both author and source should be made in all cases. The IGPS retains copyright. Please direct requests for permission to reprint articles from this publication to igps@vuw.ac.nz.

Information

For Readers

For Authors

☐ For Librarians

VICTORIA UNIVERSITY OF WELLINGTON
TE HERENGA WAKA